Water and grass: what is the real need?

How much is needed?

Often, we think grass needs more water than it really does. The rain we get is enough to keep the grass healthy and green. The rule of thumb is that grass needs 1 inch of water a week. That inch can come from rain or a hose. During summer of 2017 there was only 1 period of time where we didn't get sufficient rainfall to meet grass needs. This summer we are getting even more rain. Over watering a lawn creates problems. Soil can only hold so much water. Excess water runs off carrying pollutants to lakes and rivers. It can also increase your risk of basement flooding. The water used for irrigation is the same water coming out of your tap. It's treated drinking water. Irrigation can stress groundwater supplies which is where we get our drinking water from.
