It's fall! That beautiful time of year when tree colors pop, the air is crisp and things start settling down for the winter. After all those pretty leaves fall, it's time to get to work. Leaves fallen on forest floors decompose and restock the soil with nutrients and organic matter. In more developed landscapes, leaves may fall on streets or sidewalks. When it rains these leaves can wash off into storm drains and then into lakes and rivers where they give a pop of green color through next summer's algae blooms. Rake leaves along curbs and sidewalks. You can help keep those leaves out of lakes and rivers by sweeping or raking accumulated leaves along curbs and sidewalks. City street sweepers help with this but leaves fall more frequently than the 1 time a sweeper will drive by your house. Never rake or blow leaves into the street. Compost your leaves in a backyard compost pile. Learn how to compost in your backyard. Or take them to your city's compost heap. Depending on where you live, these may be called "yard waste" or "brush" drop sites. Contact your city or county for drop-off site locations, items accepted and any fees involved. Don't trash or burn leaves. It's illegal to add leaves to regular trash and burning them release lots of air pollution and can cause breathing problems for sensitive groups. Use leaves as mulch in your garden and lawn. Use a lawn mower to breakdown the leaves on the lawn so they fall between blades of grass. In garden beds, leaves provide a protective layer of insulation for perennial gardens and shrubbery, either bagged or loose. More tips for mulching from Minnesota Extension. Schedule a curbside pick-up. Check with your garbage hauler or other companies in the area to see if they'll haul yard waste. Yard waste haulers typically bring leaves and other yard waste to a commercial compost site. You will be required to put yard waste in compostable bags, either paper or compostable plastic.
